I will have students tell their thoughts and feelings in the following activities: in the listening activity, students will listen to a story about everyday topics, such as school life, without looking at the script. If they have difficulties getting information or understanding the story, I will advise them to listen to some key words or expressions. After listening twice, students will read the script and get more information for the next activity. In the next activity, they will exchange their opinions and ask questions about the story in pairs. After that, I will provide a writing task to summarize their opinions using a worksheet.
